The Abandoned House Mystery

The detective carefully crawled into the dark room. His flashlight was beaming and the moonlight helped brighten the room. He was pursuing a notorious thief who was known for haunting old, abandoned houses. The detective's old notebook was in his back pocket, filled with important clues. He had been on this case for weeks.

The thief was like a cartoon character. He always carried a special suitcase filled with strange items, and he wore a striped jumpsuit to hide his identity. The detective stopped in the bedroom of the house. There was a footprint on the dusty floor.

The detective bent down to examine it. The footprint led towards the bed. Kneeling onto the ground, the detective took a closer look. He looked under the bed and saw a huge spider! It gave him a fright! The spider was oozing a gross liquid.

The detective left the bedroom and crept down the hallway to the bathroom. He heard a strange noise, and a funny smell filled the air. It sounded like something was brewing. There was a large bamboo stick leaning against the door. This had to be where the thief was! The detective carefully opened the door, excited to solve the mystery once and for all.

At the Park

I woke up yawning, but once I saw the sun shining outside, I leapt out of bed. It was going to be a great day at the park. I raced out of my bedroom and down to the kitchen. Mom was cooking breakfast for my sister and me. We ate quickly, barely pausing while we chewed our food.

"You must be ready for the park," Mom laughed as we finished our breakfast. My sister and I packed our backpacks with a notebook and pencils. We loved drawing pictures at the park.

Once we were all ready, my sister, Mom, and I walked to the park. We started by playing on the playground. We went up and down on the seesaw, then crawled through the tunnels. My sister pursued me at a fast pace as we raced around the park.

When we were tired, we sat down to do some drawing. The colorful flowers were blooming by the tree. A swallow songbird was flying around them. It was a lovely scene to sketch.
