The Cake Race

It was raining outside, and Max and Tom were bored inside their home. They couldn't ride their bikes because the path was too wet.

"I'm so bored!" Tom whined.

"Why don't we bake a cake?" Max suggested.

"Even better, let's have a cake race!" Tom challenged Max. This sounded like fun!

They went into the kitchen and chose ingredients for their cakes. Max used limes to flavor his cake, and Tom wanted to make rose decorations using icing.

"I hope mine tastes good," Max said as he mixed the ingredients together.

"It looks better than mine," Tom laughed and poked the messy mixture in his bowl.

The two brothers had lots of fun making cakes. Their mom came to the kitchen to check how they were going.

"It smells good in here!" She said with a smile. "But what a mess!"

While the cakes cooked in the oven, mom helped Tom and Max clean up the kitchen. Then they got plates ready to put their cakes on.

"Time to be brave and try the cake!" Max giggled. Everyone laughed as they ate the cakes for afternoon tea.

A Historical Excursion

Alex's class went on an excursion to a historic town. They started the tour in an old-fashioned home with furniture made of pine wood. The chairs were faded with time but still looked nice.

There was an old mine where people used to mine for gold in the past. There was a long rope that hung from a pulley. It looked like a long snake as it went down into the main shaft.

Alex's favorite part was the factory where things used to be made. The tour guide showed the class how workers used fire and flames to start the machines. The machine had parts that could slide and slope. It made a lot of smoke and fumes when it started.

Alex was interested in learning more about life in the past. He took notes as they went on the tour so he could research more about how things used to be made.
