Reading Passage

Read the passage and circle the words with the suffix -es -ed -ing.

The Magician

The old magician chanted, his voice sounding like a low rumble. He stood beside a pile of ashes. This was the remnant of a failed spell. His apprentice, Leo, was helping him sort through a stand of old wooden boxes. They were trying to find the missing parts to make a spell from an old spellbook more effective.

Leo carefully arranged the bunches of potions and shiny glasses on the dusty benches in the magic workshop. A large clock on the wall was winking as its golden pendulum moved back and forth.

Outside, a soft breeze blew, sending leaves falling from the trees. Suddenly, Leo had an idea! He raced outside, confusing the old magician. Leo came hurrying back in with a large handful of leaves.

"We should see what happens when these are crunched and crushed with the blue potion," Leo said.

"Great idea!" The magician agreed. They acted quickly to see if this idea would work. The magician squinted at the potion once the leaves were added, a beaming smile on his face.

The Shipwreck

The shipwrecked crew was stranded on a desert island. The captain chanted a sea shanty to keep spirits up, and the crew joined in the singing. They had saved some broken dishes and torn dresses from the wreck. Some of the crew members were brushing sand from the pile of boxes that had washed ashore.

They worked together to build a makeshift shelter, helping each other to get it ready before the sun set. In the bushes nearby, some foxes darted around, getting ready to hunt at night.

One of the crew members climbed up a tree and was hanging a flag to signal for help. When it was nighttime, the sound of the waves smashing against the shore was like a lullaby, helping the crew relax as they drifted off to sleep. In the morning, the sun blasted heat and light. The crew were tempted to keep sleeping, but they knew they had a long day ahead of them.
