Deep in the Emberstone Mountains was a crumbling stone gate. The ancient doors were etched with long-forgotten runes and a faint glow shone through the rusty lock.

Standing before the door, unsure what was on the other side, were three companions on an important quest.

Thrain the Dwarf, Alaric the Wizard, and Elowen the Elf were prepared for whatever was on the other side of this door.

They had been sent to retrieve a precious emerald from deep within the mountains. It was thought to be the last emerald of its kind.

"Let's go in, then," Alaric said calmly.

The tall wizard knelt before the door in his flowing robes and whispered incantations in an old language.
