

Turkey in disguise craft

You can print this craft on regular print paper or use heavier print paper / cardstock; it works with both types of paper.

Depending on the age of your students and the time you have available, there are different ways in which you can set up and complete this project. You can make this project in the classroom or have it as a family project; different letters and instructions to send to families are included.

1. Make the whole project in your classroom
2. Make the whole project a family project, with the family creating the agamograph from start to finish
3. Combined - design a disguise for turkey at home, complete the project in the classroom (or if you are making a bulletin board and want it to look uniform, complete the agamographs by yourself)

Examples of turkey disguises are also included. You can include them with the project instructions or give them to students/families that ask for ideas.

A simple writing assignment is also included. The format of the writing assignment is created with a bulletin board display in mind so you can display them under each agamograph.

Voting ballots and award ribbons for the best turkey disguise can be a great addition to this project as well.
