

WINNING ISN'T EVERYTHING

A SOCIAL NARRATIVE

WINNING ISN'T EVERYTHING

WINNING ISN'T EVERYTHING...

...IT'S OK TO LOSE SOMETIMES

Engaging and relatable images for younger students.

- Short, simple stories for children, especially those with special needs.
- Helps children understand social situations and behaviors.

"Not Always Winning - It's Okay to Lose"

- Teaches children that losing is okay and winning isn't everything.
- Easy-to-understand language and visuals for clarity.

- Trying your best is important.
- Feeling sad or frustrated when losing is normal.
- Learning from losing is valuable.!"

Highlights:

- Everyone, including grown-ups, sometimes doesn't win.
- Having fun and being a good sport matter more than winning.
- Celebrating small victories is encouraged.

Promotes healthy attitudes towards winning and losing.
Helps children embrace life's challenges positively.

It's okay not to win every time. We can try our best, have fun, and learn from both winning and losing..

Sometimes, we play games or do activities, and we really want to win.
Winning can make us feel happy and proud.
But guess what? It's okay if we don't win every time.

When we play games or do activities, we try our best.
Some games are about Luck. That means we anyone can win!
Even when we do our best, we might not win, and that's okay.
It's important to remember that playing games can be lots of fun, even when we lose!

Winning and losing teaches us lots of things.
It's important to have fun when we play a game, even if we lose.

Benefits:

- Positive outlook on competition.
- Builds resilience and coping skills.
- Encourages empathy and good sportsmanship.

Teaching notes included PDF and POWERPOINT versions

Teaching Notes

A social narrative is a short and simple story that helps children to understand and navigate different social situations or behaviors. It uses clear language and visuals to teach important lessons.

The story "Not Always Winning - It's Okay to Lose" is designed to help children learn that losing is okay and that winning isn't the only important thing. Through relatable examples and easy-to-understand words, the story explains that trying your best is what matters most, and that it's normal to have feelings like disappointment or frustration when you don't win.

The story teaches that losing can be a valuable learning experience. It shows that everyone doesn't win, and that having fun and being a good sport are more important than winning. The story encourages children to celebrate their small victories, support others when they win, and understand that both winning and losing teach us important lessons.

In a gentle and reassuring way, this social narrative helps children embrace the idea that it's okay not to win every time. It promotes a positive outlook on competition, builds resilience, and encourages empathy and good sportsmanship.

- Introduction to the concept of losing and its importance.
- Examples of feelings children might have when they lose.
- Encouragement to learn from both winning and losing.

Overall Impact:

- Prepares children for various life situations.
- Fosters a well-rounded emotional development.

