How to Use the Color Key

The colored stars on each card provide a simple visual organization system. After the cards are cut apart, teachers can quickly sort them by category or combine several categories for mixed review. Store each category on a binder ring, in an envelope, or in a small storage box so the cards are easy to grab throughout the year.

As students become familiar with the system, the colors also help them recognize the type of routine being discussed before the question is even read.

Teaching Tip

Routine Review Cards are most effective when students demonstrate the routine rather than simply answer the question. Invite volunteers to model the correct procedure, have the class practice together, or ask students to explain why the routine is important. These short, consistent reviews help build classroom independence and reduce the need for repeated reminders throughout the year.
