ALL ABOUT DIWALI

What is Diwali?

Diwali (pronounced dih-WAH-lee) is one of the most important holidays in India and is celebrated by millions of people around the world. It's also known as the Festival of Lights because people light small lamps called diyas and decorate their homes with colorful lights.

Why is Diwali Celebrated?

Diwali celebrates the victory of light over darkness and good over evil. Different stories explain why Diwali is important in different cultures:

- In the Hindu tradition, it marks the return of Lord Rama to his home after defeating an evil king named Ravana.
- For others, Diwali celebrates the goddess Lakshmi, who brings wealth and good fortune, and traditions.

People may celebrate for 5 days. Diwali is a time for joy, and light!

How to Celebrate Diwali?

Diwali is celebrated in many special ways. Here are some of the common ways:

Decorating: Before Diwali, people clean their homes and decorate them with rangoli (colorful designs made of flowers), lights, and small oil lamps, called diyas, which they light into the home and outdoors. These lamps are often placed in windowsills and doorways.

People also work to light up the night sky by setting off fireworks during the festive

Lakshmi:

Goddess of wealth and prosperity. Many people pray to her during Diwali for good fortune in the year ahead.

Rangoli designs are used to celebrate and welcome the goddess to the festival.

Diwali Important?

Diwali is a time to celebrate light and happiness. It's a time to come together with family and friends, to forgive, and to start fresh. The festival teaches us the importance of light over darkness.

Diwali is a time to overcome evil and darkness. It's a time to be grateful for what we have and to wish for a better future.

During Diwali, people light a diya, making a wish. Diwali is all about the triumph of light over darkness.
