PHONICS COMICS -ive The Adventures of Lou and Fin

Fin was feeling talkative while they were painting, but Lou wanted to concentrate.

"You're so disruptive, Fin! I didn't even hear what you said."

"Do you think it would be effective to mix the colors for the clown hair?" Fin asked, feeling a bit defensive.

"More color will look very attractive," Lou agreed, using his paws to splash more colors on the canvas.

Fluency Passage

Lou and his best friend Fin went for an active walk through the town. The sun was shining, and they were feeling positive. They passed by a shop window with a sign that said: Creative Art Show: entries now open.

Lou jumped up and down eagerly. "Let's enter!"

"Great idea!" Fin was supportive of the idea. Then, he grinned cheekily. "But did you know that if you paint yourself as a clown, you get double points!"

"Wow!" Lou was attentive as Fin spoke and liked the idea. He was competitive and wanted to paint the best picture.

Lou and Fin raced home to get their art supplies out.

"I'll use my expensive paints," Lou wagged his tail while holding a paintbrush in his mouth.

Fin was feeling talkative while they were painting, but Lou wanted to concentrate. "You're so disruptive, Fin! I didn't even hear what you said."

"Do you think it would be effective to mix the colors for the clown hair?" Fin asked, feeling a bit defensive.

"More color will look very attractive," Lou agreed, using his paws to splash more colors on the canvas.

By the time the dog friends finished, their self-portraits were an explosive mixture of colors!

"I can't wait to enter mine in the art show," Lou was protective and proud of their artwork. "We are such good artists." He jumped up and down, wagging his tail.

"Remember," Fin laughed at their funny, creative paintings, "art is subjective. But I think ours are the best!"
