Why Graph Your Point Sheet Data?

See patterns over time (baseline → trend → current level)

Look beyond a single day's score to see progress, variability, and areas needing support.

Compare performance with a goal

Graph points or percentages earned, with an optional goal line.

Bring clear data to meetings

Share progress during IEP meetings, parent conferences, and behavior-support discussions.

Help students recognize their progress

Review graphs together to celebrate improvement and discuss next steps.

1 Choose points or percentages

Select the version that matches your point sheet
(point sheets sold separately)

2 Enter the daily results

Add points or percentages earned. Include a goal if you want a comparison line.

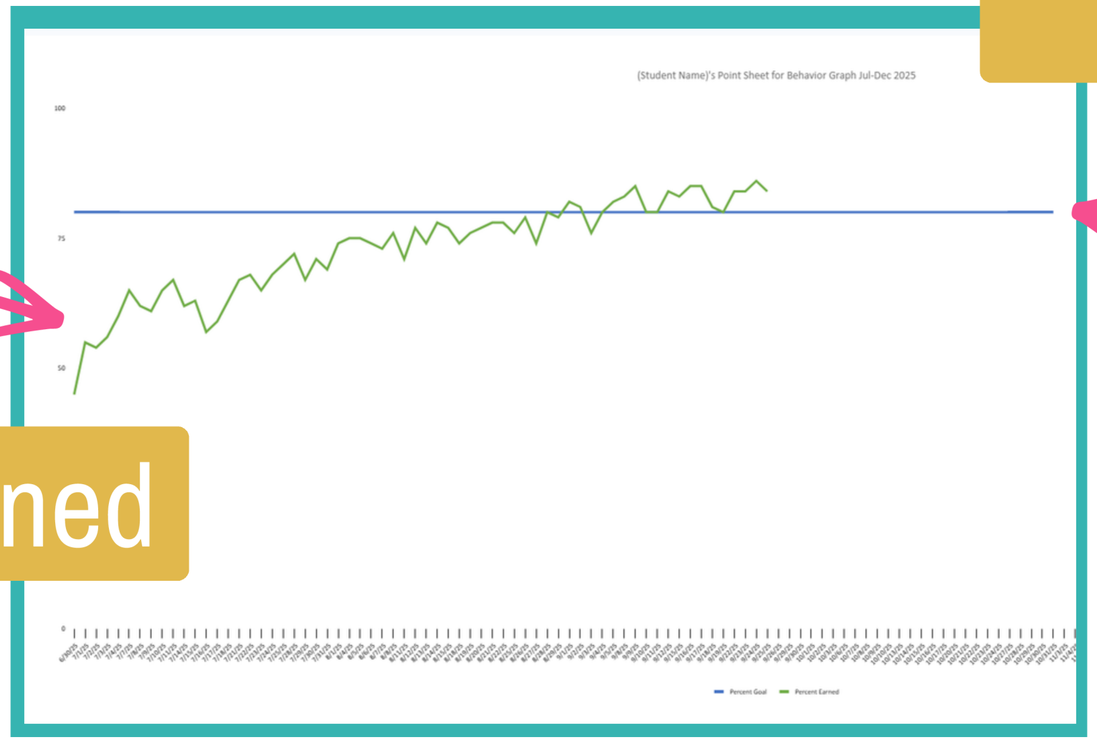

3 Review the graph

The graph updates automatically as you enter data.

★ Works with any point sheet that provides daily points or percentages.

Track Progress Toward a Meaningful Goal

Goal Line

Percentage Earned

Graph earned scores alone—or compare them with a goal.

Student Goals

Compare daily results with a goal you and the student have agreed on.

IEP Goals

Monitor progress toward an IEP goal measured in points or percentages from the student's point sheet.

Classroom Level Systems

Compare earned scores with the requirement for moving to the next level.

Use the graph to guide conversations about progress & next steps.

Also Included: Support & Examples

Example behavior graph with phase lines

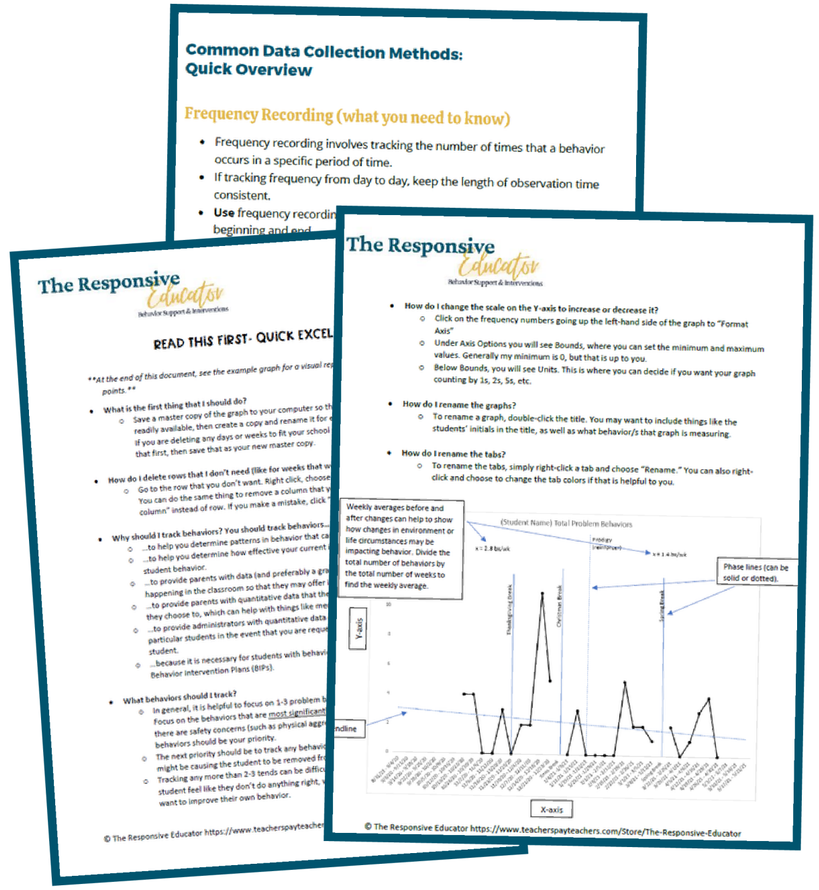

See what real progress monitoring graphs look like, including how to mark intervention changes when strategies are adjusted

Data collection method overview

Quick reference explaining when to use different data types and what each one measures best.

Quick Excel tips for easy setup

Practical guidance for adjusting graphs, adding phase lines and trendlines, and naming student graphs

Review Progress Together

Look at several days of results. Help students notice improvement and days when meeting the goal was harder.

Connect Progress to Strategies

Discuss what helped: asking for a break, accepting support, or using a practiced skill.

Choose a Next Step

Identify one strategy to keep using or one skill that needs more practice.

Make progress visible—and give students a role in planning what comes next.
