Strong FBAs Use Multiple Data Sources

© TheResponsiveEducator

✓ Direct behavior observations

✓ ABC incident data across settings and times of day

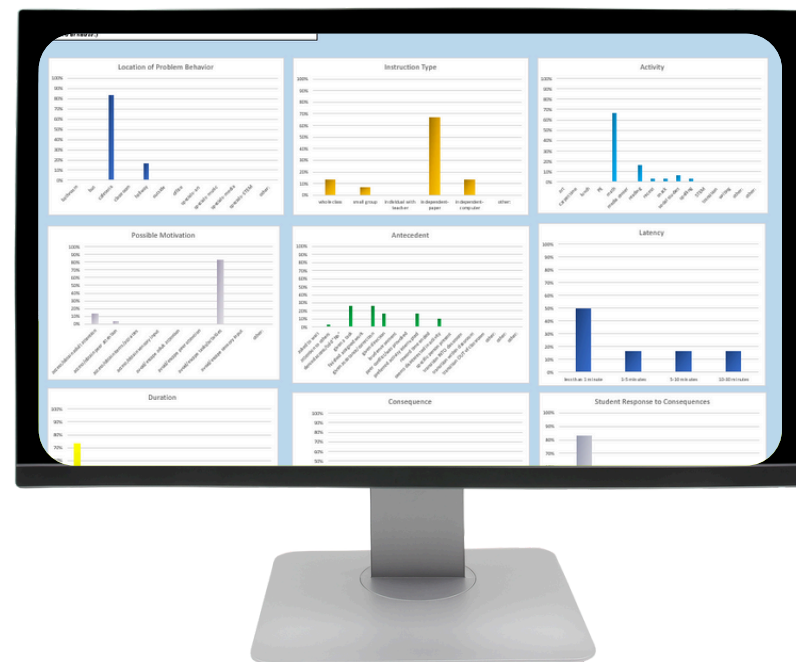

✓ Input from parents, teachers, and students

★ Using more than one data source helps avoid guessing and strengthens conclusions about behavior function.

Combine Data to Identify Behavior Patterns

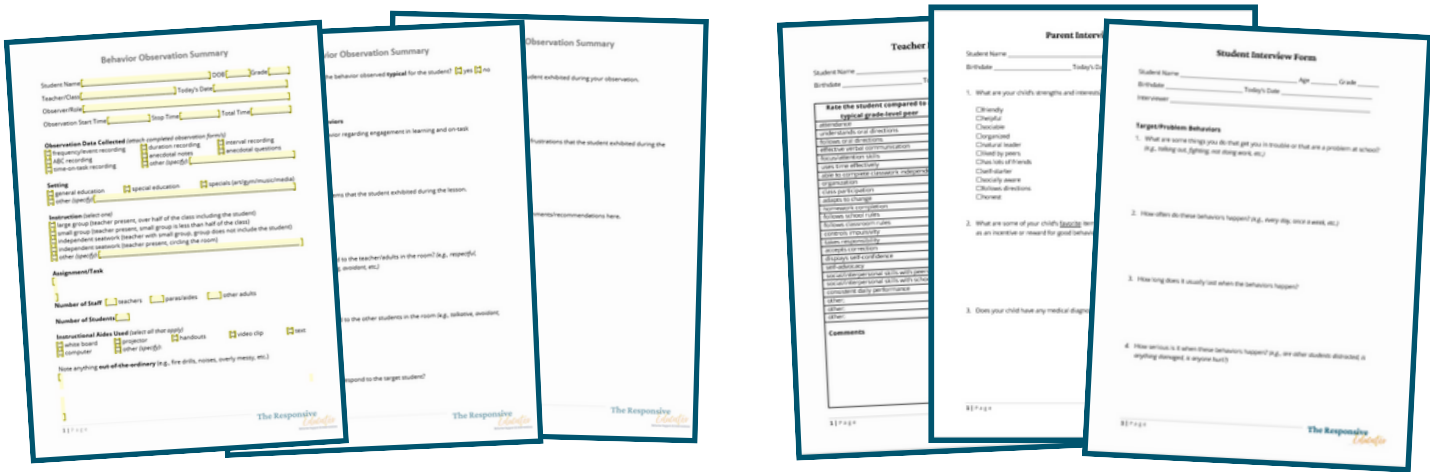

- See when and where behaviors are most likely to occur
- Compare adult and student reports with direct observations
- Identify patterns in antecedents and consequences

Easy-to-Follow FBA Process: Collect → Analyze → Document

➤ Use included forms for observations, interviews, and ABC data collection

➤ Automatic graphs help analyze and highlight behavior patterns

➤ Transfer findings directly into the FBA template

Use Data to Guide Function-Based Decisions

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Develop strong hypotheses about behavior function
- Explain patterns clearly in team and IEP meetings
- Support recommendations for services and supports
- Create a solid foundation for BIPs and interventions

★ Clear data helps shift conversations from opinions to evidence
