

SEL FEELINGS

Flashcards, Game and Jigsaw Puzzles

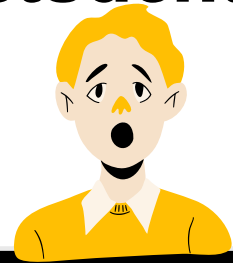

This resource is a PowerPoint presentation and will only work in presentation mode.

The game can be played on the IWB or on individual devices that have the app installed

Editable cards in two sizes are included so that you can create your own set of flashcards relevant to your students

frustrated

nervous

Editable cards in two sizes are included
so that you can create your own set of
flashcards relevant to your students

frustrated

nervous

Teaching Notes and Scenario Cards

Teaching Notes and Ideas for this resource

Social Emotional Learning and reading facial and body clues is a life skill for all students to master, especially those who may have special needs.

This pack is designed to help teach some of the more common expressions and feelings that your students may encounter in their day to day lives.

The first set of flashcards could be used to discuss these feelings and would be useful for second language learners. Discuss the facial and body features of each of the people in the images. I have used images in preference to clipart, as they convey greater meaning.

Scenario cards

- Group scenario cards can be used with your students to discuss how the people in the pictures are interacting with one another. Where might they be? What might be happening? What could happen next? Do they all feel the same? How can you tell?
- Single person scenario cards can be used with your students to discuss what may be happening? Why is the person sad? How can you tell? What might have happened to make them feel sad? What might someone do to make them feel better? Etc

These cards make a great introduction to the WHO AM I? Game which is included in this resource.

What are these people feeling?
Why might they be feeling like this?

oceanviewresources

What is this person feeling?
Why might they be feeling like this?

oceanviewresources

ontused

annoyed

bored

restless

amazed

engaging images that kids love

